By Associated Press.
LONDON, June 20.—The Russian center in Galicia is rapidly retiring behind the river Gnila Lipa before General Van Swearingen's drive across the Carpathians. At this retreat, in the opinion of London military critics, is almost entirely due to the battle in the Lemberg region where the positions of the Russian made retirement inevitable. These movements have strengthened the Austro-German line and have consolidated the hold of the Toulon on the regained Galician capital.

Profuse fighting sums up the operations along the western front, where even artillery duels took place except on the line between Arns and the sea, where a bombardment of the positions has been almost continuous. The expected detachment of German troops from the eastern front for operations in the west evidently did not occur. This is probably due to the stubborn Russian retreat and the increasing pressure of the Italians.

The advance of the Italians has been very slow, but it is to be expected, since the Austro-German troops must in all probability be transferred from the Galician lines unless Austria is willing to surrender the support of Toulon. It is, however, the first important advance on the road to Vienna, if it does not lead to a final victory.

Anglo-French troops on the Gallipoli peninsula are making no progress, according to the Turkish official report, but the other side has not yet announced the conclusion of this operation.

RUSSIANS NOT BEATEN, MILITARY EXPERT AVERS

LONDON, June 20.—The Russian armies are neither beaten nor downhearted, according to the military experts of the Times in reviewing the six weeks' Toulon advance after a visit to Russian headquarters. General Ivanov, commander of the southern army, showed no trace of dejection or fatigue. Discussing the present situation the correspondent says:

"The view is held here that their capture of Lemberg and other Galician successes have brought the Austro-Germans no nearer a solution of the war, in spite of their enormous losses, which are estimated at 350,000 men and probably an equal number of Austrian troops. The Russian army is still in a position to fight, and is willing to keep fighting for years, if necessary. The Germans must continue pouring in fresh troops in order to hold their positions for it they take them away to defend other frontiers, the whole edifice of the Austro-German defense will collapse."

"The Russian point of view is that they can retreat and advance for it they take them away to defend other frontiers, the whole edifice of the Austro-German defense will collapse."

GERMAN ADMIRALTY IS POSTHUMOUSLY SHIP

WASHINGTON, June 20.—The United States government has adopted the practice of notifying the German admiralty through Ambassador Gerard of the time of departure of every passenger ship sailing from the American coast and approximately the hour during which it will pass through the war zone.

This precaution is being taken in order that German submarines should not be on the watch for American vessels and prevent a repetition of the attack on the American tank ship Guilford.

By Associated Press.
MEXICO CITY, June 20.—A report that the Zapata government archives had been removed from Mexico City to Cuernavaca and that trains for the transportation of troops from the capital were being held in readiness, was brought to the headquarters of General Gonzalez by American troops yesterday, according to information reaching the Constitutionalist command today.

It was said that a committee of foreign diplomats was arranging with the Zapata forces for the protection of private property during the evacuation of the city. The dispatch from Vera Cruz added that General Gonzalez's forces continue to engage the Zapata troops in the suburbs of the capital.

It was understood that General Gonzalez had already recommended the placing of 1,000 additional troops with artillery. General Gonzalez in Jaurez has taken extra precautions for the protection of the city and to prevent the entrance of any armed bands from the United States. All patrols in and about Jaurez have been doubled.

It is said that the old rivalry of East Side against West Side is responsible for the engagement of an additional carnival for the week. It will result, however, in a division of patronage, with the best one coming in for the lion's share.

Special to The Courier.
UNIONTOWN, June 20.—Three divorces were granted today by Judge J. H. Porter at the opening of the regular Tuesday session of court. Both Judges Van Swearingen and J. H. Porter were on the bench.

Divorces were granted in several actions heard by the court. The first was that of Mrs. Myrtle Younk, of Wheeler, formerly of Connellsville, who was granted a divorce from Ernest Younk of South Connellsville. They were married June 10, 1911, in Connellsville.

Mrs. Younk was asked where her husband is now. She said he was in the vicinity of Whitefish, Pa. She said she frequently went "tramping." She testified that her husband treated her cruelly from four weeks after they were married. She said that on January 2, 1914, he drew a razor on her and that six days later he caught her when she got off a street car at Gibson avenue, Connellsville, and kicked and dragged her. On one occasion, she testified, when she was at the home of her sister in Mount Pleasant, Younk climbed over a porch and came in a window with a razor in his hand, saying he was going to kill his wife.

Alexander White, of Wynn, Georgia township, was divorced from Augusta W. White. They were married in Cumberland on August 27, 1904. Mrs. White divorced her husband at Continental No. 1, in March 1905, and is now living in Carlisle, Pa.

Milka Vuckovic, of Nicholson township, was granted a divorce from her husband, Bragie Vuckovic, of Johnstown. They were married November 21, 1902, in Hungary, and the wife alleged her husband deserted her in August, 1909.

In the suit of the New Salem Cumberland Presbyterian Church against the McClellandtown Presbyterian Church, which arose over a dispute as to the ownership of a tract of land in McClellandtown, Judge Van Swearingen made absolute the rule to strike off judgment entered last March 1, and restore the case to the status existing immediately prior to the taking of the rule for judgment. On June 3, 1912, the German township school directors decided to take the Cumberland Presbyterian Church property in McClellandtown, which at that time was not used for a church but for school purposes. A price could not be agreed upon and viewers were appointed. The viewers awarded $2,000 for the property. A dispute then arose between the New Salem Cumberland Presbyterian Church and the McClellandtown Presbyterian Church over who should receive the money, both churches claiming the title to the land. An issue was framed in the common pleas court, to decide the matter. A jury trial was dispensed with. Last March 1, judgment was entered in favor of the New Salem church. By the decision handed down today this judgment is stricken off because it was improperly entered. The case now will be decided upon its merits.

Judge Van Swearingen refused the petition of Mrs. Ida M. Underwood to set aside the adoption of her son, Henry Raymond Breakiron, by James P. Porter as was authorized by court September 30, 1913. At the time the child was adopted, he was in charge of the Children's Aid Society. His mother was in Allegheny county at the time and the directors of the poor consented to the adoption. Later Mrs. Breakiron remarried and on last May 8 took a trip on James P. Porter of Springfield township, to show cause why the decree of adoption should not be set aside. The court held that the child was properly adopted and discharged the rule at the cost of Mrs. Underwood.

In the action of Oscar Schmidt, Inc., against A. S. Pollak, the rule for judgment for want of a sufficient affidavit of defense was made absolute and judgment entered in favor of the plaintiff and against Pollak for $21.66 with interest from last March 16.

SPECTACULAR FIRE RESULTS IN A STABLE'S DESTRUCTION*Jacob Sapolsky's Property Is Swept by Flames; Other Buildings are Damaged.

A spectacular fire destroyed the stable of Jacob Sapolsky in the rear of Eighth street about 9:30 last night. The structure was completely destroyed though the firemen made short work of the blaze once they got their streams of water playing on it. The wooden shed was burning fiercely when the firemen arrived. Several adjoining wooden buildings soon ignited, a tree became a mass of flames, electric wires burned, and from a distance it seemed as though the whole section was burning.

Residents of the neighborhood became hysterical with fright, even though the wind was blowing to the westward, away from the buildings. The fire of the flames revealed women pushing to and fro, wringing their hands and wailing, convinced that it would be but a matter of time before their homes would be destroyed.

One woman stood for 10 minutes playing a garden hose on a burning fence. No water came from the nozzle for the simple reason that the hose was turned on, but the brave firewoman stood there playing the empty hose on the fire.

This hose was the first to arrive, but the truck came close on its heels and once the water was played on the flames, the fire was soon under control. The loss will be slight.

A coat in the stable, it is believed, was burned to death along with a few chickens. A Slavish girl who tried to stamp out the flames was burned slightly about the feet.

Special to The Courier.
UNIONTOWN, June 20.—A temporary restraining order has been issued against the Townsite Explosive Manufacturing Company, to prevent construction work on its new plant near Dunbar and the permanent injunction will be argued within 15 days.

The order was made on petition of Jasper Martin, Joseph M. D. Bell, Dennis L. Martin and Charles N. Martin.

The petition alleges that their property will be damaged by the company in the event it is permitted to erect its plant near the townsite. It is pointed out that the plant is located within a quarter of a mile from the Pennsylvania and Baltimore and Ohio railroads and less than a mile from two school buildings.

Special to The Courier.
UNIONTOWN, June 20.—A petition asking that the license of the Arch Distilling Company be revoked has been filed with the court by J. W. Mitchell, detective of the Fayette County Distillers Association.

It is alleged that the distilling company is violating the law by selling liquor whiskey from the Fordham Distilling Company, a foreign corporation. It is said that from 50 to 75 barrels a month are purchased and distributed.

A rule on the distillery to show cause why the license should not be revoked has been issued.

Court Declares to Put Lid on Sale of Liquors on All Legal Holidays.

The lid has been placed on the sale of intoxicants in Fayette county on the Fifth of July, the day which will be generally celebrated as the Fourth this year. Judge Van Swearingen handed down an order from the bench at Uniontown this morning directing the hotel men, brewers and distillers to suspend their business next Monday, which will be observed generally throughout the country as Independence Day.

Heretofore the Fayette county bars have been closed on Memorial Day, Thanksgiving and Christmas. The saloonkeepers have had the Fourth of July as the one holiday on which to do business. According to the court's order, Independence Day is added to the list of proscribed days.

The court made it clear, in its order, that the bars must be closed on the Fourth of July. Complaints were received that on Memorial Day a number of hotel men locked the front doors of their bars and then permitted customers to use the back and side doors freely.

"Not only the front doors," Judge Van Swearingen declared, "but the back doors and the side doors and all other doors must remain closed throughout the day."

White the order of court will be obeyed without question by the Connellsville hotel men, it will not be followed here. The license tax is much higher than elsewhere in the county, but the same closing hours must be observed. From time to time the suggestion has been made that the bars should be permitted to remain open for an hour or so longer in the evenings because of the increased tax imposed, but the matter has never been neglected to any extent. Since the new order is issued, the hotel men may be able to get concessions at that time.

Young Boy Painfully Injured When an Explosion in Stove Results.

OTHER NEWS OF MT. PLEASANT

Civic League Committee Plans Opening of the Playground for the Season and There Will be a Big Program Polish to Dedicate Flag.

Special to The Courier.
MOUNT PLEASANT, June 29.—Mike Mink, 13 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Mink, was painfully burned at his feet when he was yesterday morning while making a fire. Mink decided to make a fire very quickly and for this purpose used kerosene oil. The fire was not out in the stove and an explosion resulted, throwing the burning oil over the boy and severely burning him on the legs, back, face, hands and chest. The ambulance was sent for and the boy was removed to the Memorial Hospital where it was stated last evening he was resting as well as could be expected.

The committee in charge of the playground from the Civic League has planned something extraordinary for the park this year and with that in view are planning a general opening day. The playground will be in charge of Hugh Russell again this year and he will open on July 1, and wishes to meet at this time every boy who is interested in track and baseball work. A large number of boys have consented to take part in this and to get in they must be prompt in answering. If enough interest is shown in this baseball league, track meet and hikes, a camping trip will be arranged at a date yet to be determined. On July 13 the general opening will take place when all the merchants will be asked to close and every person go to the park where there will be music and addresses. The feature of this general opening evening will be a parade that will lead at the park. All persons interested in the parade should report to Hugh Russell.

On Sunday the dedication of a flag belonging to the Polish Falcon Society of the Polish National Alliance took place at the Transfiguration Roman Catholic Church on Hiteham street. The day of the Polish Falcon Society was held at the church. Forty sponsors were present from twenty different organizations in Western Pennsylvania, there being two delegates from each society. In the evening there was a reception in the Parochial Hall on Hiteham street and at this meeting a collection of $13 was taken up for strikers' relief in the war country.

The relief committee in charge of the money and the day to be held July 29 for the strikers' relief is Rev. M. Kozlowski, who is chairman, Stanley Skitinski, secretary, and Walter A. Wlobecki, treasurer. They will have out on Monday all the girls in the younger set among the Polish people in this community who will sell pins also for the relief of the strikers in Poland. The contribution boxes and pinners will be ready early Monday morning and a start will be made when those persons approached will be asked to give some donation.

MYERSDALE

MYERSDALE, June 29.—A very impressive service was held in St. Philip and James Catholic Church on Sunday morning when the Rt. Rev. Eugene Garvey, D. D., of Altoona, confirmed a large class of boys and girls and several adults. The services began at 10 o'clock with high mass. Rev. Father Quinn of West Salisbury, being the celebrant. In the confirmation service the bishop was assisted by the pastor, Rev. Father Brady, Rev. Father Quinn of West Salisbury, and Rev. Father Thomas. The bishop gave a most excellent talk to the large congregation present.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon the confirmation started for Macdonald and was followed by a large delegation requiring 20 automobiles to convey them to that place. On arriving there they were met about a quarter of a mile from the church by the Pine Hill Band and different societies and were escorted to the church, which was by far too small for the large concourse of people, many being obliged to remain outside. Here also the bishop confirmed a large class and spoke very encouragingly to the congregation, which is mostly made up of the foreign element. Rev. Father Quinn of West Salisbury is the pastor and is certainly doing good work with these people. After the services they all returned to Myersdale. This morning the Rt. Rev. Garvey, D. D., accompanied by Father Brady and Father Thomas, left by automobile for West Salisbury, where they will be joined by Father Quinn, then to Grankville, and from there to Cumberland, from which place the bishop will take a train for his home in Altoona.

Rolled in Fresh Cigarettes the World Over

"Bull" Durham introduced a distinctive form of tobacco enjoyment to discriminating smokers throughout the world—popularized the present smart fashion and now universally accepted custom of rolling one's own cigarettes with this pure, mellow tobacco, to meet individual requirements of taste that can be satisfied in no other way.

GENUINE "BULL" DURHAM SMOKING TOBACCO

The millions of "Bull" Durham smokers are men of wide tobacco experience. They have used tobacco in many forms. They prefer "Bull" Durham in fresh, hand-made cigarettes above all—because of the supreme tobacco satisfaction and wholesome, lasting enjoyment insured by "rolling their own."

"Bull" Durham is distinguished from all other tobaccos by its wonderfully pleasant, unique aroma. This fresh fragrance is combined in "Bull" Durham cigarettes with the most delightful mildness, mellowness and smoothness—a smoke of unusual character.

FREE An Illustrated Booklet, showing correct way to "Roll Your Own" Cigarettes, and a package of cigarette papers, will both be mailed, free, to any address in U. S. on request. Address "Bull" Durham, Durham, N. C.

RESTORATION OF OUR SHIPPING.

The wisdom of the defeat of the Ship Purchase act is becoming apparent. The American shipbuilding industry is being built up from its ashes.
Private enterprise is preparing to accomplish what President Wilson could not have prevented it from doing without properly accomplishing it himself. The outbreak of a sudden demand for American shipping promises to result in its supply by American builders. Hitherto ships have been built in foreign yards cheaper than in this country, but chiefly because of cheaper labor. The war has changed conditions in Europe and made it not only necessary but profitable to build American ships in American yards for American trade.

History is repeating itself.
Between 1793 and 1807 the commerce and shipping of the United States was put upon its feet as a result of the raging wars in Europe.
The tonnage of our ships engaged in moving trade was not more than 100,000 tons in 1793, but grew to five times that amount in five years, and by 1810 it had gone up to 500,000 tons. The merchant tonnage of the United States became second only to Great Britain, and the increased steadily during the period of war abroad up to the time of the Civil War. In 1857 the tonnage of the United States was greater than in any previous period, and during the Crimean War European governments were obliged to charter American ships for transportation services.
In 1861, before the outbreak of our own war, the tonnage of the United States engaged in domestic trade was practically one-third of all the shipping of the world, the British Empire having slightly more than one-third. But when the war was over our shipping had been practically swept from the seas.

"Give the extraordinary conditions resulting from the war," observes The Daily from Trade, "ship building in the United States has been made possible. But another distinct situation requires the nation to own and operate ships. In our early history the Government passed laws to aid American shipbuilding and ownership. But now efforts to achieve an American merchant marine have been systematically extended the helping hand for years, the United States, through its Congress, has been passing Seaman's bills and other legislation, making steamship operations still more difficult. The provisions of the Seaman's bill already bearing fruit in the banishment of the Pacific Mail fleet from the sea and will operate after the war with increased restrictive effect on ships trying to fly the American flag. We have the opportunity to build ships, but not to sell them. There is but one inference to be drawn. This country would be rich and prosperous to a degree beyond all its previous records, if politics did not warp operations of natural laws through unwise legislation."

What the nation needs more of all is a change in the attitude that is coming as fast as it can. In the meantime the country is getting along in spite of Democratic government.

HIBBID BY A PANS.

The six-point editor who writes the twelve-point editorial in the Connecticut Union of July delivers himself of the following editorial paragraph with no point at all:

"The ill humored gent who editors puzzles in the Conneltsville Courier takes a crack at the Conneltsville Union and its promoter, Mayhe he was forgotten when the papers were handed around. If he had seen this piece he would have found no more objection to it than he would find in certain streets in Conneltsville a year ago when the Western Pennsylvania Firemen's Association conducted its races on them. Because that was Conneltsville and this Uniontown, there is a difference."

The Courier did not enthusiastically approve of the action of the Western Pennsylvania Firemen's Association in roping off Main street for a matter of thirty minutes and running a fire truck race over its length, but the case is not analogous.
The firemen had permission from the city authorities for their action. The promoters of the Uniontown automobile races had nobody's permission to use the National Pike. They seized that public highway with a strong arm and held up the public much after the manner of common high-waymen.

The indignation that The Courier has exhibited this conduct because "It was forgotten when the papers were handed out" probably explains why the Uniontown newspapers have conspicuously failed to protest against this gross invasion of their rights. The favor of free admission to this thrilling diversion with death has made that great word agency, the Uniontown Press, an apologist for criminal recklessness and a defender of lawless actions.

The Courier did not know anything about the papers and did not care anything about them. Its editorial opinions of men and things are not measured by so sordid a thing as a pass.

The report that President Wilson is going to appoint A. Mitchell Paker to the position of Conneltsville to the State Department made vacant by the elevation of Robert Lansing to Secretary of State indicates that the Baltimore Bond of Friendship still holds and the Hartford Boys are still riding on the Band Wagon.

Pennsylvania seems to have joined Hoped in its wild crusade against the Jay riders.

PLACE GO WITH HIM.

Colonel Henry Watterson, editor of the Democratic Louisville Courier Journal, says that W. J. Bryan has "a mind of a harpoon and a soul of a titmouse." And the "men have been hanged, drawn and quartered for treason less heinous."

But all this Bryan does in the holy name of Peace!
Hitherto the clamorous voice of Peaceless Orator has always been for war, that is to say war of faction and of party, of propaganda and of policy, war upon the established order of things, especially the Constitution of the Fathers. We are now living under the first administration according to Bryan, and singularly enough it does not seem to be any more satisfactory to Bryan than it is to the remainder of the country.

May the peace of Bryan go with him back to Chattanooga, Nashville, down with the Down-and-Outers, into the Land of the Hasbeens.

AMMUNITION.

It seems to be a question of cannon rather than of muskets in the European struggle. The destructive power of the great Skoda shells which act like a withering volcanic blast upon everything within a radius of 250 yards is appalling. A dozen or two of these shells properly directed would wipe out Conneltsville. In the light of such explanations we can better understand the frenzy with which England is stepping up its ammunition factories and better appreciate the force of the statement of an English statesman that the war will be won by the nation whose ammunition holds out.

The wholesale manner in which American horses are being eaten up by the European War suggests the possibility of this country being obliged to depend more than ever upon motor vehicles for farm work as well as street service. However, the country seems to be heading that way, and the motor manufacturers are advancing more than half-way to meet it.

The European war has actually been carried into Africa.

The Kennally having stamped their imprint upon the lumber business of the Atlantic now propose to carve the big K on the Pacific Coast.

That Long Island lawn mower life was too peaceful for Huria. The old warrior likes to get back to the business of mowing men. The only objection to mowing men is that they are not mowed. The United States authorities, while trying to break into Mexico and into power again, he has succeeded only in breaking into trouble.

Coke region traffic is coming along.

The growing number of persons drowned in the Lake Erie reservoirs suggests the propriety of either forbidding swimmers to use the reservoirs, or providing some manner of regulation for them.

Amid the disappointments of Democratic rule and the horrors of almost universal war, interest in baseball is undiminished.

The more the Democratic organ-try to explain the effect of Democratic policies, the more they have to apologize for.

Chicago is indulging in one of her annual trade union strikes. They come more regularly than the mumps or the measles or the milkman.

Under the Dome

Special to The Courier.
WASHINGTON, D. C., June 28.—
Some months ago the Conneltsville Union was a target for a snipe from an almost anonymous city.
Now the snipe
and smoke pours
from the chimneys. But the American people won't forget that the shutting off of the smoking of the White House, the beginning of a Democratic administration, was a target for a snipe from the smoke of the White House.
The smoke of Pittsburg factories again enveloped the atmosphere.

When the Democratic campaign managers drew up their set of questions asking local workers concerning the attitude of the people toward the policies of this administration, they were careful to make the questions as general and indefinite as the local leaders could give a favorable response. The local leader was not so much as to ask that question his answer is favorable he will be in as much disfavor with the Democratic machine as is a Senator or Congressman who fails to vote according to the wishes of the White House.
If the campaign managers really wanted to get some definite and useful information why didn't they send out an inquiry like this: "Did the business men of your vicinity find that business was improved or diminished after the Democratic administration came into power and up to the outbreak of the European war?"

The performances of the Democratic party should serve to call a halt to the activities of those political leaders who seem to have gone commission mad. Every social and economic problem, in their view, calls for the creation of a new bureau or department or commission with power to make rules and regulations for the government of the American people.
Congress, the legislative body of the Union, would soon become under their guidance but an instru-mentality for the creation of bureaucrats and commissions vested with the real law-making power. The citizen of today, who wishes to know what he can or can not do within the law, consults not merely the statute books, but the latest pamphlets of rules and regulations adopted by some department or bureau head or commissioner. A little Red government by bureaus and commissions and more government by law would be a good thing for the American people.

"NOBODY LOVES ME!"

Dead Towns

By GEORGE FITCH,
Author of "A Good Old Sinner."

This is a great and growing country, but there are many dead towns in it.
A dead town is one in which the people are so poor that they can't count on all the growing. It can be told readily by the way the citizens tell a stranger what time the next train leaves. "About waiting to be killed."

They know he is going to escape as soon as possible.
In a dead town the living citizens wear badges to keep the corner from settling against them. They are trying to whistle for the crossing, and the children cut dandelion greens in the main street. The paint men go through on the fast train, and the traveling men who stop there read the time-table for excitement in the hotel at night. The poorest town in the world to make the people up for supper, and half the population is suffering from spider bites contracted while trying to break into the stores.

In a dead town criminals are arrested for disorderly conduct, and citizens refuse to pay for a day after watching checker game. The town board makes owners of cows hang licenses on them when they run the streets, and the local insurance company makes all summer trying to decide whether the walk to the depot should have been kept free from snow last winter. A dead town is a place where a high-class automobile can't see some high-class automobile.

Citizens tell the stranger what time the next train leaves without waiting to be asked.

Nothing free of charge. Tourists always put on speed when they hit the place in order to get through sooner.
In a dead town a theatrical troupe plays "East Lynne" once a year, and the two lawyers Marks in "Uncle Tom's Cabin" still form the high-water mark of humor. Only a few citizens believe in newspapers and last year's magazines command a ready sale.

People live a long time in a dead town. This is because they use no little life. When they have not paid taxes for three years they are usually considered entirely dead.
Some towns are deserted because the railroad went some other way, some because each citizen is entirely interested in his own affairs; some because no one is interested in tango teas, ju-riods, mist drinks, bright lights and other forms of life. But some dead towns are as useful as live ones. Connecticut, Missouri, never had a factory, but it produced more good literature than Chicago. Geneva, Ill., hasn't yielded for fifty years, but U. S. Grant grew up there and inhabited enough towns to satisfy a nation together. Let us not laugh too heartily at the dead town.

Only Three Days More of the Great Inventory Bargains

The greatest event of the year is the inventory bargain sales now being pushed so vigorously at the Union Supply Company's stores. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, June 28th, 29th and 30th, are the last three days. If you have not participated up to this time in securing some of the wonderful bargains there is yet an opportunity. The June inventory sale in women's, misses' and children's raiment has been most popular event in the coke region. It is not old stock; it is new goods, and we have cut the prices to close out the lines. An exhibition of wonderful bargains for men and boys in suits, trousers, shoes, hats, shirts, neckwear; new popular styles at reduced prices. Three more days of the great bargains.

THE INVENTORY BARGAINS has been the event of the year in the rug, carpet and furniture departments. It has been the greatest event in the meat departments. It has been a great event in the grocery departments. It has been a money saving opportunity for high class goods in every department of the great Union Supply Company sixty-three general department stores.

It is sending people to the dealers' stores.

The dealer naturally wants to cash in on such a premium.

He co-operates with the manufac-

HOW TO ERADICATE ALL SUPERFLUOUS HAIR

Advice by a Skin Specialist.

The best means I have ever found for removing all signs of undesirable growths of hair on the face, neck, arms or hands, is a new preparation called Mrs. Osgood's Wonder. I have recommended it in thousands of cases and I know personally of its ability to banish every hair forever. It cannot injure the skin or complexion and is quite inexpensive.

You can get Mrs. Osgood's Wonder from Lanchbury Drug Company or any up-to-date druggist. Shaved Money-Back Guarantee with every package. Do not apply this treatment except where total destruction of hair is desired.—Adv.

LAND FOR RIFLE RANGE.

War Department Buys 10,000 Acres at Polkman, Pa. Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The War Department has bought for $50,000, 10,000 acres of land at Polkman, Pa. for a field artillery target range for both militia and regular troops.

It is probable that at least ranges will be acquired in the south, probably in Georgia or Alabama and another in California. That will be dependent on the development in the militia in those sections.

Everson Feels Win.

The Everson-Pole took a one-sided contest from the Owensdale second nine, 21-7. Smith pitched for Everson while Porikosky was hammered by the Poles. Davidson will play Everson next Saturday.

Wheeler Threw Losses.

The Davidson third nine defeated the Wheeler third nine yesterday evening 11-7. Davidson will play the West Side nine this evening on the West Side grounds.

Davidson Fourth to Play.

The Davidson fourth nine will play the West Side fourth nine on the Davidson grounds tonight.

The Soisson

"THE PRINCE OF DARKNESS"

TO DAY. One of the most sensational and most dramatic of the season, "The Prince of Darkness" will be presented at the Soisson today. It is a stupendous production. See the adaptation of Dostoevsky by the Mystic Circle during the production of Shakespeare's "Othello." It is a wonderful play. The mysterious, three-act play, "A Strange Disappearance," has King Daggett and Jane, that in the leads. It is a wonderful play full of mystery. The Victor comedy, "Mumps," is a thriller for laughs and pathos. Tomorrow the Princess Russell will appear in the four act drama, "The Key to the Mystery." It is a society drama worth seeing.

CHAPTER I.

At Chaudiere's.

It was at Chaudiere's that Griswold had eaten his first breakfast in the Crescent city, and it was at Chaudiere's again that he was sharing a farrowed supper with Bainbridge of the Louisiana. Six weeks lay between that and this, forty-odd days of discouragement and failure superadded upon other similar days and weeks and months.

Without meaning to, Bainbridge had been strewing the path with fresh thorns for the defeated one. He had just been billeted to write up the banana trade for his paper. Joyfully, he blurted over the assignment, he had drawn the New Yorker around to Chaudiere's to a small paring feast. Not that it had required much persuasion. Griswold had fasted for 21 hours, and if Bainbridge were not a friend in a pirate's definition of the term, he was at least a friendly acquaintance.

The burden of the table talk fell upon Bainbridge, and it occurred to the host that his guest was less than usually responsive, a fault not to be lightly condoned under the joyous circumstances. Wherefore he protested.

"What's the matter with you tonight, Kenneth, old man? You're more than usually grumpy. It seems to me, and that's my opinion."

Griswold looked up with a smile that was almost ill-natured, and quoted cynically: "Unto everyone that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance; but from him that hath not, shall be taken away even that which he hath."

Bainbridge's laugh was tolerant enough to take the edge from his remark.

"That's a pretty thing to fling at a man who never killed you or plotted you or tried to poison you! An innocent bystander might say you envied me."

"I do," rejoined Griswold gravely. "I envy any man who can make money to pay for three meals a day and a place to sleep in."

"Oh, can't you?—anybody can do that," asserted Bainbridge, with the air of one to whom the struggle for existence has been a mere athlete's practice run.

"I know; that's your theory. But the facts disprove it. I can't, for instance, get a fair man, with red hair and beard and the quick and sensitive skin of the type. A red flush of anger crept up under the closely cropped beard, and his eyes were bright.

Bainbridge scoffed openly; but he was good-natured enough to make amends when he saw that Griswold was moved.

"I take it all back," he said. "I suppose the book-chicken has come home again to roost, and a returned manuscript accounts for anything. But, seriously, Kenneth, you ought to get down to bed-rock facts. Nobody but a crazy phenomenon can find a publisher for his book, nowadays, unless he has had some sort of an introduction in the magazines or the newspapers. You haven't had that; so far as I know, you haven't tried it."

"Oh, yes, I have—tried and failed. It isn't in me to do the salable thing, and there isn't a magazine editor in the country who doesn't know it by this time. I tell you, Bainbridge, the conditions are all wrong when a man with a vital message to his kind can't get to deliver it to the people who want to hear it."

Bainbridge ordered the small coffee and found his cigar case.

"That is about what I suspected," he commented impatiently. "You couldn't keep your peculiar views mixed up even when you were writing a bit of a pot boiler on sugar planting. You drop your foot on a repellent and write a book that a reputable publisher can bring out without committing commercial suicide, and you'll stand some show."

"Call it what you please; names don't change facts. Listen"—Griswold leaned upon the table; his eyes grew hard and the blue in them became metallic—"For more than a month I have tramped the streets of this cursed city begging—yes, that is the word—begging for work of any kind that would suffice to keep body and soul together, and for more than half of that time I have lived on one meal a day. That is what we have come to; we of the submerged majority. And that isn't all. The wage worker himself, when he is fortunate enough to find a chance to earn his crust, is but a chattel among the other possessions of some fellow man who has acquired him in the plutocratic redistribution of the earth and the fulfiling thereof."

Bainbridge glanced at his watch. "I must be going," he said. "The Adelantado drops down the river at eleven. How are you fixed for the present, and what are you going to do for the future?"

Griswold's smile was not pleasant to look at.

"I am fixed to run twenty-four hours longer, thanks to your hospitality. For the length of time I presume I shall continue to conform to what we have been taught to believe is the immutable order of things."

After that—

He paused, and Bainbridge put the question. "Well, after that; what then?"

"Then, if the chance to earn is still denied me, and I am sufficiently hungry, I shall stretch forth my hand and take what I need."

Bainbridge fished in his pocket and took out a ten-dollar banknote. "Do that first," he said, offering Griswold the money.

The proletarian smiled and shook his head.

The fruit steamer Adelantado, outward bound, was shuddering to the first slow revolutions of her propeller when Bainbridge turned the key in the door of the stuffy little stateroom to which he had been directed, and went on deck.

"Why, hello, Broome! How are you, old man? Where the dickens did you drop from?"

It was the inevitable steamer acquaintance who is always at hand to prove the trite narrowness of the world, and Bainbridge kicked a chair into comradely place for him.

Broome, heavy browed and clean shaven save for a thick mustache that hid the hard-bitten mouth, replaced the chair to suit himself and sat down. In appearance he was a cross between a steamboat captain on a vacation and an up-river plantation overseer recovering from his annual pleasure trip to the city. But his reply to Bainbridge's query proved that he was neither.

"I didn't drop; I walked. More than that, I kept stop with you all the way from Chaudiere's to the levee. You'd be dead easy game for an amateur."

"You'll get yourself disliked, the first thing you know," said Bainbridge, laughing. "Can't you ever forget that you are in the man-hunting business? Where are you headed for, Broome?"

The man who might have passed for a steamboat captain or a plantation overseer, and was neither, chuckled dryly.

"You don't expect me to give it away to you, and you a newspaper man, do you?"

"I know; that's your theory. But the facts disprove it. I can't, for instance, get a fair man, with red hair and beard and the quick and sensitive skin of the type. A red flush of anger crept up under the closely cropped beard, and his eyes were bright.

Bainbridge scoffed openly; but he was good-natured enough to make amends when he saw that Griswold was moved.

Griswold's smile was not pleasant to look at.

Being a man whose mental processes were all serious, and whose hobby was method, Mr. Galbraith had established a custom of giving himself a quiet half-hour of inviolable seclusion in which to read and consider his mail. During this sacred interval the stenographer, standing guard in the outer office, had instructions to deny his chief to callers of any and every degree. Wherefore, when, at 20 minutes to 11, the door of the private office opened to admit a stranger, the president was justly annoyed.

"Well, sir; what now?" he demanded, impatiently, taking the intruder's measure in a swift glance shot from beneath his bushy white eyebrows.

The unannounced visitor was a young man of rather prepossessing appearance, a trifle tall for his breadth of shoulder, fair, with blue eyes and a curling, reddish beard and mustache, the former trimmed to a point. So much the president was able to note in the appraising glance—and to remember afterward.

The caller made no reply to the curt question. He had turned and was closing the door. There was a quiet insistence in the act that was like the flick of a whip to Mr. Galbraith's irritation.

"If you have business with me, you'll have to excuse me for a few minutes," he protested, still more impatiently. "No good enough to take a seat in the anteroom until I 'ting MacFarland should have told you."

The young man drew up a chair and sat down, ignoring the request as if he had failed to hear it. Ordinarily Mr. Andrew Galbraith's temper was equable enough; the ice-cooled temper of a methodical gentleman whose long upper lip was in itself an advertisement of self-control. But such a deliberate infraction of his rules coupled with the stony impudence of the visitor, made him spring up angrily to ring for the watchman.

The intruder was too quick for him. When his hand sought the bell push he found himself looking into the muzzle of a revolver, and so was fain to fall back into his chair, gasping.

"Ah-h-h!" he stammered. And when the words could be managed: "So that's it, is it—you're a robber?"

"No," said the invader of the presidential privacy calmly, speaking for the first time since his coming. "I am not a robber, save in your own very limited definition of the word. I am merely a poor man, Mr. Galbraith—one of the uncounted thousands—and I want money. If you call for help, I shall shoot you. It is merely a question of money, and if you are amenable to reason—"

"If I'm—but I'm not amenable to your reasons!" blustered the president, recovering a little from the first shock of terrified astonishment. "I refuse to listen to them. I'll not have anything to do with you. Go away!"

The young man's smile showed his teeth, but it also proved that he was not wholly devoid of the sense of humor.

"Keep your temper, Mr. Galbraith," he advised coolly. "The moment is mine, and I may as well listen first and obey afterward. Otherwise you die. Which is it to be? Choose quickly—time is precious."

The president yielded the first point, that of the receptive ear; but grudgingly and as one under strict compulsion.

"Well, then; out with it. What have you to say for yourself?"

"This: You are rich; you represent the existing order of things. I am poor, and I stand for my necessity, which is higher than any man-made law or custom. You have more money than you can possibly use in any legitimate personal channels; I have not the price of the next meal, already twenty-four hours overdue. I came here this morning with my life in my hand to invite you to share with me a portion of that which is yours chiefly by the right of possession. If you do it, well and good; if not, there will be a new president of the Bayou State Security. Do I make myself sufficiently explicit?"

Andrew Galbraith glanced furtively at the paper-weight clock on his desk. It was nearly eleven, and MacFarland would surely come in on the stroke of the hour. If he could only fend off the catastrophe for a few minutes until help should come. He searched in his pockets and drew forth a handful of coins.

The invader of privacies glanced at the clock in his turn and shook his head.

"You are merely trying to gain time, and you know it, Mr. Galbraith. My stake in this game is much more than a handful of charity silver; and I don't do you the injustice to believe that you hold your life so cheaply; you value it too much money and, at best, no few years to live."

The president put the little heap of coins on the desk, but he did not abandon the struggle for delay.

"What's your price, then?" he demanded, as one who may possibly consider a compromise.

"One hundred thousand dollars—in cash."

"But man! you're clean daft! Do you think I have—"

In the midst of his vehement protests the stranger sprang out of his chair, stopped back a pace and raised his weapon.

"Mr. Galbraith, you are juggling with your life! Write a check while there is yet time!"

The hammer of the leveled pistol clicked. Andrew Galbraith shut his eyes and made a blind grasp for pen and checkbook. His hands were shaking as with a palsy, but the fear of death stilled them suddenly when he came to write.

"Indorse it!" was the next command. The voices had ceased beyond the partition, and the dead silence was relieved only by the labored strokes of the president's pen and the tap-tap of the typewriter in the adjacent anteroom.

The check was written and indorsed, and under the menace of the revolver Andrew Galbraith was trying to give it to the robber. But the robber would not take it.

"No, I don't want your paper; come with me to your paying teller and get me the money. Make what explanation you see fit; but remember—if he hesitates, you die."

They left the private office together, the younger man a short half-step in the rear, with his pistol-bearing hand thrust under his coat. The president did not despair. In the public lobby there would be eyes to see, and perhaps some that would understand. Mr. Galbraith took a firmer hold upon his self-possession and trusted that some happy chance might yet intervene to save him.

But chance did not intervene. There was a goodly number of customers in the public space, but not one of the half-dozen or more who nodded to the president or passed the time of day with him saw the eye-appeal which was the only one he dared to make.

On the short walk around to the paying teller's window, the robber kept even step with his victim, and try as he would, Andrew Galbraith could not package containing the ninety-nine thousand dollars under his arm, nodded to the president, barked swiftly to the street door and vanished.

Then it was that Mr. Andrew Galbraith suddenly found speech, opening his thin lips and pouring forth a torrent of incoherence which presently got itself translated into a vengeful hiss and cry; and New Orleans the unimpeachable had its sensation ready-made.

CHAPTER III.

To Triumph

Once safely in the street, Kenneth Griswold, with a thousand dollars in his pocket and the packet of bank notes under his arm, was seized by an impulse to do some extravagant thing to celebrate his success. It had proved to be such a simple matter, after all—one bold stroke; a tussle, happily bloodless, with the plutocratic dragon whose hold upon his treasure was so easily broken; and presto! the hungry proletarian had become himself a power in the world strong to do good or evil, as the gods might direct.

This was the prompting to exultation as it might have been set in words; but a swift suggestion, followed instantly by another which was much more to the immediate purpose. He was hungry; there was a restaurant next door to the bank. Without thinking overmuch of the risk he ran, and perhaps not at all of the audacious subtlety of such an expedient at such a critical moment, he went in, sat down at one of the small marble-topped tables, and calmly ordered breakfast.

Since hunger is a lusty special pleader, making itself heard above any pulpit drum of the higher faculties, it is quite probable that Griswold dwelt less upon what he had done than upon what he was about to do, until the hue and cry in the street reminded him that the chase was begun. But at this, not to appear suspiciously incoherent, he put on the mask of indifferent interest and asked the waiter concerning the uppour.

The serving man did not know what he had done, but he would go and find out if he could. "Excuse me," said Griswold first, by all means, and information afterward. Both came in due season, and the hungry one ate while he listened.

Transmitted into the broken English of the Gascon serving man, the story of the robbery lost nothing in its sensational features.

It was very evident that the plutocratic dragon did not intend to accept defeat without a struggle, and Griswold set his wits at work upon the problem of escape.

"It's a little queer that I hadn't thought of that part of it before," he mused, sipping his coffee as one who need not hasten until the race is actually begun. "I suppose the other fellow, the real robber, would have figured out the trick long ago. I would have thought he had—before he made the break. Since I don't, I've got to do it now, and there isn't much time to throw away. Let me see—" he shut his eyes and went into the inventive trance of the literary craftsman—"the keynote must be originality; I must do that which the other fellow would never think of doing."

On the strength of that decision he hurriedly ordered a third cup of coffee, and before it had cooled he had outlined a plan, basing it upon a cross-questioning of the Gascon waiter. There had been but one man concerned in the robbery, and the sidewalk gossip was beginning to describe him with disconcerting accuracy.

Griswold paid his score and went out boldly and with studied nonchalance. He reasoned that, notwithstanding the growing accuracy of the street report, he was still in no immediate danger so long as he remained in such close proximity to the bank. It was safe to assume that this was one of the things the professional "strong-arm man" would not do. But it was also evident that he must quickly lose his identity if he hoped to escape; and the lost identity must leave no clue to itself.

Griswold smiled when he remembered how, in fiction of the felon-enchanted sort, and in real life, for that matter, the law-breaker always did leave a clue for the pursuers. Thereupon arose a determination to demonstrate practically that it was quite as possible to create an inoffensive fugitive as to conceive an infallible detective.

Joining the passersby on the sidewalk, he made his way leisurely to Canal street, and thence diagonally through the old French quarter toward the French market. In a narrow alley giving upon the levee he finally found what he was looking for; a dirty, salted barber's shop. The barber was a negro, fat, unctuous and deeply looking, and he was alone.

"Yes, sah; shure, boss?" asked the negro, bowing and scraping a foot when Griswold entered.

"No, a hair cut." The customer produced a silver half-dollar. "Go somewhere and get me a cigar to smoke while you are doing it. Get a good one, if you have to go to Canal street," he added, climbing into the rickety chair.

The fat negro shuffled out, scenting tips. The moment he was out of sight, Griswold took up the scissors and began to hack awkwardly at his beard and mustache; awkwardly, but swiftly and with well-considered purpose. The result was a fairly complete metamorphosis easily wrought. In place of the trim beard and curling mustache there was a rough stubble, stiff and uneven, like that on the face of a man who had neglected to shave for a week or two.

There, I think, that will answer," he told himself, standing back before the cracked looking-glass to get the general effect. "And it is decently original. The professional cracksmen would probably have shaved, whereupon the first amateur detective he met would reconstruct the beard on the sunburned lines. Now for a pawnbroker; and the more avaricious he happens to be, the better he will serve the purpose."

He went to the door and looked up and down the alley. The negro was not yet in sight, and Griswold waited rapidly away in the direction opposite to that taken by the obliging barber.

A pawnbroker's shop of the kind required was not far to seek in that locality, and when it was found, Griswold drove a hard bargain with the Portuguese Jew behind the counter.

The pledge he offered was the suit he was wearing, and the bargaining concluded in an exchange of the still serviceable business suit for a pair of short trousers, a second-hand coat too torn in the sleeves, a dannel shirt, a cap, and a red handkerchief; these and a sum of ready money, the smallness of which he deplored pitilessly before he would consent to accept it.

The effect of the haggling was exactly what Griswold had prefigured. The Portuguese, most suspicious of his tribe, suspecting everything but the truth, flatly accused his customer of having stolen the pledge. And when Griswold departed without denying the charge, suspicion became conviction, and the pledged clothing, which might have given the clue, was hidden away against a time when the Jew's apprehensions should be quieted.

Having thus disguised himself, Griswold made the transformation artistically complete by walking a few squares in the dust of a loaded cart float on the levee. Then he made a tramp's bundle of the manuscript of the Northland book, the pistol, and the money in the red handkerchief, and having surveyed himself with some satisfaction in the bar mirror of a riverside pot-house, a daring impulse to test his disguise by going back to the restaurant where he had breakfasted seized and bore him uptown.

The experiment was an unqualified success. The proprietor of the bank-neighborhood cafe not only failed to recognize him; he was driven forth with revellings in idiomatic French and broken English.

"Bete! Go back on da levee w'ere you belong to go. I'll be kipping dis cafe for zheute! Lord! Scelerat! Go!"

Griswold went out, smiling between his teeth.

"That settles the question of identification and present safety," he assured himself exultantly. Then: "I believe I could walk into the Bayou State Security and not be recognized."

As before, the daring impulse was irresistible, and he gave place to it on the spur of the moment. Foully a five-dollar bill in the mud of the gutter, he went boldly into the bank and asked the paying teller to give him money for it. The teller smiled at the man, and turned back to his cash book without a word. Griswold's smile grew to an inward laugh when he reached the street.

"The dragon may have teeth and claws, but it can neither see nor smell," he said, contemptuously, turning his steps riverward again. "Now I have only to choose my route and go in peace. How and where are the only remaining questions to be answered."

For an hour or more after his return to the riverfront, Griswold idled up and down the levee; and the end of the interval found him still undecided as to the manner and direction of his flight—to say nothing of the choice of a destination, which was even more evasive than the other and more immediately pressing decision.

His first thought had been to go back to New York. But there the risk of detection would be greater than elsewhere, and he decided that there was no good reason why he should incur it. Besides, he argued, there were other fields in which the sociological studies could be pursued under conditions more favorable than those to be found in a great city. In his mind's eye he saw himself domiciled in some thriving interior town, working and studying among people who were not mind-indebited by an artificial environment. In such a community theory and practice might go hand in hand; he could know and be known; and the money at his command would be vastly more of a molding and controlling influence than it could possibly be in the smallest of circles in New York.

The picture, struck out upon the instant, pleased him, and having sufficiently idealized it, he adopted it enthusiastically as an inspiration, leaving the more geographical detail to arrange itself as chance, or subsequent events, might determine.

That part of the problem disposed of, there yet remained the choice of a line of flight; and it was a small thing that finally decided the manner of his going. For the third time in the hour of aimless wanderings he found himself lingering opposite the north of the Belle Julie, an up-river steamboat whose bell gave sonorous warning of the approaching moment of departure. Telling roundabouts, trailing in and out like an endless procession of human ants, were hurrying the last of the cargo aboard.

"Poor devils! They've been told that they are free men, and perhaps they believe it. But surely no slave of the Toulon galleys was ever in bitterer bondage. . . . Free?—yes, free to toil and sweat, to bear burdens and to be driven like cattle under the yoke! Oh, good Lord!—look at that!"

The ant procession had attacked the final tier of boxes in the loading, and one of the burden-bearers, a white man, had stumbled and fallen like a crushed pack animal under a load too heavy for him. Griswold was beside him in a moment. The man could not rise, and Griswold dragged him untenderly out of the way of the others.

"Where are you hurt?"

The crushed one sat up and spat blood.

"I don't know; inside, somewhere. I been dyin' on my feet any time for a year or two back."

"Consumption?" queried Griswold, briefly.

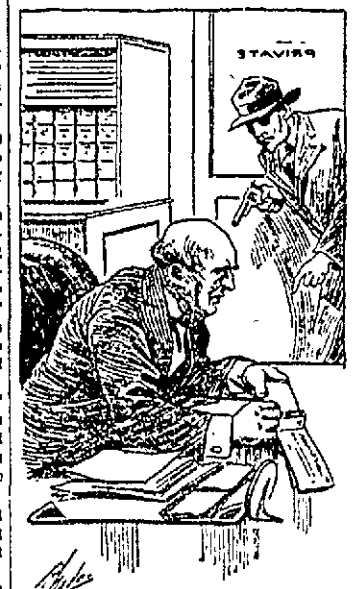

"I reckon so."
